Toowoomba singers called to share stage with stars in special Armistice Centenary Concert - Voices of Remembrance

The Queensland Government in partnership with Queensland Music Festival (QMF) will stage a commemorative concert – Voices of Remembrance – at Toowoomba’s Empire Theatre on 9 November 2018, starring renowned New Zealand baritone Teddy Tahu Rhodes and award-winning songstress Katie Noonan.

Choristers will have the chance to join the stars on stage for the Voices of Remembrance musical extravaganza, with Music Director Dr Jonathon Welch – founder of The Choir of Hard Knocks – putting a call out for community choirs and individuals to audition to perform live at the concert.

QMF is planning for a 200-strong mass choir and a core choir of 30 for the Voices of Remembrance concert. From 11 to 29 June, interested choristers can submit an online audition to be part of the special concert, either with their existing choir, or as individuals.

Choristers all over Queensland can also be involved in the Voices of Remembrance program by learning the concert repertoire in their own communities. Choirs should showcase their work by performing at pop-up events, community gatherings or formal concerts in the lead up to, or in conjunction with their Remembrance Day services.

Queensland choirs and individuals can register their interest now at qmf.org.au to learn more about how they can be involved, and to receive the concert repertoire when it becomes available online in July 2018.

Those who participate can attend workshops or join rehearsals via livestream with Dr Welch and composer / conductor Gordon Hamilton, Artistic Director of The Australian Voices, to ensure they are in fine voice for their big night.

The repertoire will include First World War-era favourites such as Keep the Home Fires Burning alongside modern pieces by contemporary artists who have written song cycles about the women at home and first-hand experiences at the Western Front.

A community orchestra conducted by Patrick Pickett will help bring to life the musical tribute in Toowoomba. The concert will feature a distinctively localised musical narrative written by Queensland director Dan Evans, highlighting the contribution of the Australian Light Horse who turned the tide of First World War in Beersheba.

QMF Artistic Director Katie Noonan said the concert would be a reflection on war and peace.

“This concert will help everyone reconnect with moving stories from the First World War and celebrate the peace that came with the signing of the Armistice,” Ms Noonan said.
